- WHY: To help raise enough money for Josh Wills to have a lung transplant.

Josh Wills was diagnosed with Cystic Fibrosis (CF) at 6 months old. CF is a genetic disease that affects the lungs and digestive tract. Unfortunately, there is no cure so most people who have CF, at some point, will need a double lung transplant due to gradual lung deterioration. Daily breathing treatments and percussion are required in order to maintain daily activities. This helps loosen the mucus that builds up in his lungs daily. Josh is 32 years old and for the most part has led a very active life. The past two years has been a different story. Josh has been in and out of the hospital for lung infections and now has to be on oxygen all the time. The family has twin girls that are 2 years old. They love to help there daddy with his treatments and bring such a bright light to things.
